Three enthusiastic youngsters take a peek at what school holds in store for them. School children in the Valley have a last fling at summer this weekend before starting classes Tuesday.

WASHINGTON--Advocates of mandatory safety devices on automobiles declare if people are too unconcerned to care for their own well-being, then it is up to the government to care for them.

That's a little like saying compassion is not a human experience, but a bureaucratic edict. And, therefore, something which cannot be left to chance.

This was the premise behind the federal decision to require a starter-interlock-buzzer system on 1974 models to protect us from self-imposed mass carnage on the highways.

To anyone who has gone through the motions of buckling-up just to start the car, it is obvious the system works. It is just as obvious that seat-belts save lives. But what is not quite so certain is just how much government "compassion" should be imposed, if indeed there should be any.

As with most government decisions that "compassion" us to wits end, the starter-interlock-buzzer system was an idea that began in a bureaucratic huddle, spread to liberal congressional sympathizers and became law almost before we knew it.

Aside from Ralph Nader-type assaults on the insensitive auto industry, the public did not have much input into the legislative debate leading to the safety requirement.

But the issue is opening again. Two senators--James Buckley, R-N.Y. and Thomas Eagleton D-Mo.--want to amend the mandatory seat-belt legislation. Their proposal parallels a measure introduced on the House side by Rep. Louis Wyman, R-N.H.

Public resentment has triggered these attempts to rescind the seat-belt law. Correctly, people are calling the law an "invasion of motorists' rights" by federal bureaucracy. Wyman's bill passed the House by an overwhelming margin--indicating that House members, at least, keep in touch with voters.

It may not be so easy in the Senate. Passage of the bill there depends on the case presented by House members at a joint conference. Of course, if the Buckley-Eagleton amendment passes on its own, there will be no need for the joint conference. The seat-belt law would become nothing more than a requirement that auto manufacturers make the starter-interlock-buzzer system optional.

Unlike some other extras legislated as mandatory on autos, the seat-belt system is not expensive. Total cost for the system, according to the Department of Transportation, is about $90. Eliminating the locking provision will save about $40.

So, the cost is not prohibitive. But the idea behind the system is publicly demeaning.

Seat-belts are responsible for saving more lives in accidents than any other safety feature. Reports are issued daily that cite cases where lives would have been lost without them. Tragically, the same reports also list instances of death because the victim was sitting on his seat-belt.

Federal intervention in our daily lives is becoming more and more dominant. And that is the argument against mandatory seat-belts. The question is not a matter of whether we want to save lives--certainly, we do. But do we want to live with federal restraint stultifying personal decisions?

Commercial and institutional consumers of paper products are increasingly outraged and despairing over the paper industry's alleged shortages and its zooming price levels.

William White, procurement officer for the Washington, D.C., Board of Education, says prices have gone up an average of 100 percent for the school system's paper in less than a year. School cafeteria paper supplies are 106 per cent higher than last year's, with paper towels going from $3.60 to $8.90 a case.

"How you're going to get that big a budget, I don't know," bemoans Walter Coley, the school cafeterias' buying officer.

New York City and Los Angeles school systems are experiencing the same super paper inflation. Louise Valesano, the paper buyer at the Los Angeles Board of Education, said, "It will bankrupt the school system if we don't watch it."

Robert D. Nelson, executive vice-president of the Los Angeles TIMES, didn't mince words when he told us:

"Newsprint manufacturers have been unconscionable in their pricing policies in recent months and this is creating a hardship for U.S. publishers."

Nelson asserts that his newspaper cannot get all the newsprint it needs. His paper was paying $163 per ton for 32 lb. newsprint at the start of 1973; it is now paying $230 per ton. Paper companies are pushing 30 lb. paper at $245 per ton on newspapers, some of whose executives complain about its poor quality.

With the lifting of price controls over the paper industry this spring, the crunch descended mercilessly on small business. Laundries, print shops and small magazines face cutoffs or price increases of up to 300 per cent.

Take, for example, the pleas of Richard Heinrich of the Heinrich Envelope Company in Minneapolis. Some of his paper prices are up 100 per cent over last year, and the paper companies are requiring his firm to pay up within ten days from the ordering date. Previously he had 60 days to pay and sometimes received a discount for prompt payment. Now he often finds the paper arriving days after he has paid for it.

"You don't dare complain to the mills," Heinrich explained. Supplies are too low and he can't risk further cuts. The giant paper mills are in the driver's seat and are selling the kinds of paper that are most profitable and dropping the kinds of paper that aren't as profitable. It's a take-it-or-leave-it industry attitude.

Smaller printers in the Washington, D.C., area think they are being rated by the paper companies according to their size. These printers are not getting what they need from their traditional suppliers and some believe that, as one printer put it, "there's tons and tons of collusion going on."

Increasingly, the words "black market" are heard by merchants who say that paper is available if you've got the money to pay the exorbitant prices demanded by intermediaries.

The head of an average size printing firm told us, "Three paper houses called the same day with the same increases. I thought I might ask them to put out a joint communique instead."

A usually outspoken chief executive of a large New York publishing company declined to be quoted by name because he didn't want to lose his suppliers. But he did note "an interesting correlation" of price increases by different companies. Even with book paper prices up 25 to 30 per cent over 1973, he is still unable to purchase some kinds of paper and finds other grades in very limited supply.

Other smaller users of paper are stunned victims. The 116-year old Atlantic Monthly found itself, in editor Garth Hite's words, "completely and arbitrarily" cut off last October by the St. Regis Paper Company.

Hite said that the cutoff was precipitated when St. Regis decided to sell more paper to a bigger customer, Time, Inc., which was launching the new magazine, People. Another small magazine, the New Leader, was confronted with a 300 per cent increase. Editor Mike Kolatch points to other small magazines which are suffering or failing, in significant part due to paper prices.

The paper mills know the effects their prices and allotments are having on their customers, but they claim their costs--labor, chemicals, freight, and pollution controls--are rising to justify their price hikes. However, paper company profits are not simply keeping up; they are soaring.

The industry giant, International Paper Company, is not atypical in expecting to nearly double its net profits this year over 1973--a year in which its profits were 56 per cent higher than its 1972 level.

Concerned about a potential backlash from Washington and organized smaller businesses, the paper companies have just recently announced plans for expanding their plant capacity to relieve the tight supply situation. But the three-year lead-time for new plants, if they are actually built, won't help the bankruptcies, the further concentration of economic power, or today's fight against inflation.

Monterey County Day is event at State Fair

Carmel Valley residents will want to attend Monterey County Day at the California State Fair in Sacramento which opened Aug. 23 with a roaring twenties theme.

Fair-goers can spend hours satisfying their curiosity and their whims, starting with the inevitable carnival, which includes a super-slide for the first time this year.

Exhibit buildings for commercial, professional and amateur displays are numerous. There is the art show, theater presentations and various types of music from high school bands and drum and bugle corps to the rock blare on "The Rock."

The county exhibits buildings will house displays of agriculture, mining products and the environment of over 40 counties.

Commercial exhibits will offer the latest in home appliances and gadgets, some of the finest wine and brandies of the state and several international offerings.

The floriculture pavilion will bring exotic plants and flowers to the fairgoers and numerous places are available for concessions.

Several night shows, a series of rodeo performances and dining at "On Stage" on the grandstand will round out a day at the fair, including quarter-horse, Appaloosa and thoroughbred parimutuel racing.

board of supervisors

Salary increase vote delayed

The Board of Supervisors delayed by at least one more week final action on an ordinance to raise their own salaries by $50 a month.

As moved by Warren Church, District 1, the board will consider a $50 a month pay hike for the supervisors at 2 p.m. Tuesday in the board's chambers.

A boost in salary from $1,050 to $1,125 a month had previously been suggested.

Only five letters on the matter were received in the past week, one in favor of the hike and four against, and only one citizen, representing a group, appeared to speak on the issue.

Victor Rudolph of the Monterey County Taxpayers' Association pointed out, "Last year when the board attempted a 56.2 per cent increase, a petition drive was initiated and successfully overturned that pay raise, although later a 30.2 per cent increase was successful for the board, "adding that it may be too soon to expect citizens to welcome another pay raise for the supervisors."

He continued, "I'd like to know how much of your time you spend on planning matters. Probably 75 to 80 per cent. Our concern is that often the board appears mired in planning problems when those questions could be thrashed out in the commission and the planning department."

Rudolph said, "Last year, an assessment board was instituted to take care of that work. We've now got a $600 a month secretarial service for the supervisors, not to mention the various fringe benefits that accompany the position."

"I have three points," he concluded, noting the absence of Arthur Atteridge, District 2, "First, all members of the board should be present when voting occurs on this matter. Second, we can start holding the line on inflation by having the highest administration in this county not vote itself a raise. Third, the board of directors of the MCTA has been polled and is unanimously against such an increase."

Willard Branson, District 5 and chairman of the board, commented, "Someone talked to me a little while ago and said, 'It's only $3,500 across the board--what are you worried about?' That's the whole point, it keeps adding up with a little bit here and a little bit there."

"The only way to stop inflation is simply not to spend. If we are not the ones to make such a decision, who will? It's the principle of the matter. This country will live or die by its principles," he continued.

Warren Church, District 1, had three points to offer. "First, I think we have to avoid a situation where the supervisors' salaries are much lower than reasonable, and so I suggest a $50 a month increase. Second, I also think along the same lines for those on the planning commission. The $100 a month they get is mere peanuts. Third, perhaps we can cut spending by reducing the $600 limit on secretarial service," he said.

Roger Poyner, District 4, offered comparisons with some other counties. "We have traditionally compared certain costs and services with 12 other similar counties and salary-wise we have traditionally been on the low side. Averaging the salaries of the boards of supervisors for the 12, we get a mean of $1,273 a month," he said.

Poyner continued, "The present comparison of this board is that we are 21.2 per cent below average."

"Some increase is warranted in fairness to those who will follow us on this board. We can't afford to get behind so far again that when the board tries to raise its pay to a reasonable level the populace is shocked," he said.

"People who aspire to office and might want to serve should also be able to look for fair compensation for the 40 hours a week it will take them to effectively do this job," Poyner continued.

Ellis P. Tavernetti, District 3, commented, "I share the feeling that those who come after us deserve a little advance problem solving. I support a five per cent increase effective January 1975."

Branson countered some of Poyner's remarks before the issue was tabled until next week, saying "I beg the issue when we start comparing Monterey county with other counties. What is most important is the relationship of Monterey to Monterey on its own progress."

Pointedly, he closed discussion with, "Let future boards fight their own battles."

Impact report for Rio project certified adequate

An environmental impact report on the Rio Road Motel, proposed for development by Carmel Properties Inc. of Monterey, noting possible problems with traffic and air pollution was certified as adequate by the board of supervisors at their meeting Tuesday.

The report indicated that of the estimated 560 to 640 movements between the motel and Highway 1, about 60 movements will be to and from the south with the remaining 500 to 580 movements contributing to existing congestion on Highway 1 north of the motel.

The proposal is for a 127 room motel and restaurant on a 3.8 acre site north of Rio Road, about .1 mile east of Highway 1.

The report noted a statement made earlier by Dyer H. Campbell of the state Department of Transportation in relation to the 800 to 1,200 movements per day generated by the Meharry Motel, saying the same statement held true for the Rio project:

"Volumes of this magnitude are not large enough to constitute a problem, but Route 1 traffic in the Carmel Area has reached critical volumes and the additional traffic generated by this project and other pending developments in the area will aggravate the existing situation," the prior statement read.

In discussing air pollution potential problems in the valley and at its mouth, the report first set forth a definition of an "air pollution area" as a place where eye smarting and plant damage are possibilities," drawing on the Conference on Air Pollution in California.

The report then noted that figures in the EIR of the Meharry Motel in 1973 showed Carmel Valley on the brink of becoming an air pollution area, and noted the small airshed characteristics of the valley itself. It also explained that temperature inversion is an atmospheric condition that traps air and pollutants in some areas.

Estimating that the 14,000 people in the valley operate between 5,500 and 7,500 automobiles, the report said the motel would add about 175 automobiles, an increase of between 2.3 and 3.2 per cent.

The report continues, "It is evident then that this project itself does not present an immediate threat to air quality in the valley. Rather a more subtle unsuspected attack is occurring. Each project only adds a small percentage to the air pollution problem and no one project is the culprit."

Noting the Meharry Motel, the Rio Motel, two theaters, a bank, a proposed office complex and the proposed Carmel Del Pacifico subdivision, the report said the potential exists to increase the air pollution in the Carmel Valley airshed by 18 to 25 per cent.

Among other areas of concern, the report also explained that the removal of 16 apartment units existing as a non-conforming use on the land would displace about 44 people who may have trouble finding low cost housing that will accept children in the area.

Adverse effects listed in the report which "cannot be avoided" include increased air pollution, traffic, water consumption, load on sewer system, loss of open space, removal of mature trees and displacement of sixteen families.

Alternatives suggested included no project, a residential development which would create much the same in the way of adverse effects, developed park, smaller motel.

Hatton Canyon Road feasibility study says serviceability lower

A two-lane one-way highway northbound through Hatton Canyon would cost $4-million and would not be as serviceable as other suggested alternatives, according to Bruce W. McClain, public works director, at the board of supervisors meeting Tuesday.

Willard Branson, District 5 and chairman of the board, issued copies of a memorandum Tuesday that McClain had prepared in answer to Branson's request for a feasibility outline.

The proposed 10 per cent maximum grade would create noise problems if trucks used the route, McClain said. Most highways are limited by the state to a seven per cent grade.

McClain said in his report, "Trucks will probably stay on existing Highway 1 because of the steep grade of the proposed route. This means that existing problems on that highway past the school will continue.

Those problems are noise and lowering the road's serviceability, he said.

McClain's report also pointed out that should the state decide to proceed with its freeway, the Hatton Canyon highway could neither be salvaged nor kept open while the freeway was under construction.

In summary, the report said, "The county can build a suitable two-lane road to help reduce the load presently existing on Highway 1. This could be accomplished with minimal cut and fill, a lesser degree of environmental impact than the state and for less cost.

"The state's proposal, however, offers more capacity, less inconvenience for trucks and a lesser noise level. The cost, however, is over $7 million (1974 dollars)."

McClain also pointed out that with construction costs increasing about 14 per cent annually, no estimate of cost was valid without a clarifying date.

The report said delay in construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway by the state, the many objections to the state design and the increasing congestion on Highway 1 between Carmel Valley Road and Ocean Avenue all suggested perhaps a two-lane county road could be constructed within the state right of way as an interim measure.

The $4 million cost projected for the proposed road assumes a state donation of the right of way and would be higher if the county had to purchase the land from the state.

Pointing out that while existing demand is for 2,200 cars at peak hour, maximum capacity for the road is currently 1,780 cars per hour, the report notes that the new road could relieve the existing road of about 640 vehicles at peak hour in the northbound road. The southbound lanes would not be affected.

At a five per cent yearly rate of increase, the old road would be back at capacity in three years, the report said.

Various action taken Tuesday in board meeting

In addition to action noted in other stories on this page, the board of supervisors voted to:

McMahan couple honored on marriage

A summer garden reception honoring Mr. and Mrs. David Otto McMahan, who were married August 4 in the Chapel of the Bells in Reno, Nev., was held last week at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton M. Frincke, Brookdale Drive.

The former Linda Marie Frincke wore a gown of navy and white dotted swiss and carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds at the double ring ceremony performed five minutes before midnight.

Attendants who accompanied the couple to Reno by private plane were Caren Cruter, Palo Alto, and Stewart McGee, San Jose.

A graduate of Carmel High School and Monterey Peninsula College, the bride is secretary-receptionist at the office of Dr. Robert A. Auger.

Mr. McMahan, a pilot for a cargo airline based at San Francisco International Airport, is a graduate of Robert Louis Stevenson and Fresno State. He is the son of Mrs. Lou McMahan of Pebble Beach and George McMahan of Carmel Valley.

Summer flowers set the theme for the buffet-champagne reception with numerous planters of colorful begonias, umbrella tables and island torches complimenting the festive occasion. The couple cut their three tiered wedding cake decorated and topped with a nosegay of fresh flowers, while guests danced to the music of a live band.

Assisting at the reception were Mrs. Tom Argust, Mrs. Lin Marinkovich the bride's brothers, John, Tom, and Jim, and Jim's wife, Sue, who was in charge of the bride's book.

Guests from out of town included the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Milton H. Frincke of Santa Rosa, Mrs. Margaret Frincke of South Pasadena, and James Ferguson of Raymondville, Tex. Also Mrs. Pete Harmon of Oklahoma City and Miss Evelyn Ferguson of Berryville, Ark.

The couple will make the Valley their home. They leave next week in a mobile home for a wedding trip to Chalma, New Mex., on a bear hunting expedition.

Reception honors Smith

CV Kiwanis at gathering

Kiwanis of Carmel Valley was among the clubs represented at the three day District Convention last week in Sacramento.

California, Nevada, and Hawaii make up Division 43, the largest district in Kiwanis, and had 1,000 delegates among the 3,500 in attendance.

RIDER and horse seem pleased with form during a practice session for the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club's 19th Annual Horse Show on Saturday and Sunday. Sally Bennett, who with her mount Beau-Rivage, placed first at the Cow Palace, is a junior member of the club and is aiming for "Horsewoman of the Year," competing for all special trophies. Show time for the free performances is 8 a.m. both days.

Recycling project stymied

The Carmel Valley Community Center's newspaper recycling project has run into problems with a notice from the Valley disposal company that the factories were running behind in processing the papers.

Their dumpster was removed from the parking lot, but one of the moving companies has promised the center a large wooden case for storage until the factory has used up its supply.

Please tie your newspapers in bundles or place in cardboard cartons when leaving at the Center.

Aluminum cans are also still being accepted. The Center has collected over sixty dollars in profits to date. Please box or bag and, if at all possible, crush your donation. All proceeds will be used to help promote center activities.

Garden club members sought

Each prior member is urged to bring a prospective new member to the September 12 meeting of the Carmel Valley Garden Association.

The 8:00 p.m. general meeting in the multipurpose room at Tularcitos will be followed by a program and refreshment hour, according to club president, Mrs. Clyde Hitchcock.

Birthday party shared

Sharing a birthday party on Sunday were Mrs. Barbara Ryan and her granddaughter, Miss Kathleen Mahaney, both of Pacific Grove.

The special family gathering at the Paso Honda home of Mrs. Ryan's daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Sherman, honored her 75th birthday while Kathleen was celebrating her 12th.

In addition to the Sherman children, Matt, Steve, Laura, Tim, and Denise those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mahaney, Molly, Pat and Susan, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mahaney, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Mahaney, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sherman, Peter Mahaney and his fiancée, Kathy Thompson.

Special dancing planned

Two period dance groups of interest to Carmel Valley residents have announced the beginning of their seasons with opening sessions in early September.

The Society for Creative Anachronisms, a Medieval and Renaissance interest group, will meet at 5 p.m. Sunday at 879 Linden, Apt. 8 Monterey in connection with the formation of the newly initiated shire of Montelinas. The main subject will be costume.

The Jesters, fund-raising auxiliary of the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art, will begin their second Greek Dance Series at 8 p.m. on Sept. 11 at the Barn, Mission Ranch near Carmel with an open house including free Greek dance lessons.

The Society for Creative Anachronisms recreates through tournaments, revelry, music, dance and drama the Medieval and Renaissance periods in Europe.

Their discussion and lecture sessions cover subjects from heraldry and etiquette to the art of combat and alchemy. Sessions often include practice of the subject. The group is interstate.

The Salinas Packers, the California Angels California League farm team, placed three men on the 1974 All Star Team, according to League President Eddie Mulligan.

Packer All Stars are shortstop Dave Machemer, utility player Darrell Darrow and pitcher Bill Rothan. Only the Fresno Giants had more players on the special squad, placing four.

Class A baseball can be a better brand than major league, or it can be worse than Little League. Players often have the talent, but not the consistency normally found in the majors.

If you have a chance, drive over to Salinas Municipal Stadium and take in a Packers game. The $1.50 admission is reasonable and the atmosphere is totally unique.

Guidelines for improvement of roads

Guidelines for improvement of private roads in minor subdivisions were accepted Tuesday morning at the Board of Supervisors meeting.

The guidelines are based on the total number of lots that could possibly be created in the future. "Therefore, zoning is the key," according to the introduction.

Under the guidelines, road improvements must be made to standards to meet the needs of the maximum number of lots allowed by zoning. An exception will be made to that rule of thumb for lots 10 acres or larger.

The standards are outlined for various land uses, and are detailed for pavement width, right of way, materials and drainage. They include:

Pavement Width

Pavement width for five to 16 building sites shall be 18 feet if the lot size is less than five acres, 16 feet if lot size is five acres or more.

Pavement width for 17 to 42 building sites will be 20 feet if lot size is less than five acres, 18 feet if the lot size is five acres or more.

The guidelines note that road improvements may be reduced to half the width or a minimum of 12 feet, whichever is greater, when the private road right of way is centered on the property line between applicant and adjacent property owners.

Right of Way

Four two to four building sites, the right of way will be 30 feet. For five or more sites, it must be 60 feet.

Pavement Materials

Four inch base rock is required for the base material. On roads with slopes of 0 to 8 per cent, the finished surface will be a double seal coat. For roads with slopes greater than 8 per cent, two inch A.C. will be used for the finished surface.

Drainage

When a ditch is required in the cut, a ditch grade of 0 to 4 per cent will be surfaced in dirt. Ditch grades of 4 per cent and above will be surfaced in asphaltic concrete.

According to the guidelines, the minor subdivision committee shall take into account any special consideration to change standards when the applicant makes any qualifying information available.

Any lot shown on an application as being 10 acres or larger in size will be considered a single lot by the committee when evaluating requirements for private road construction, regardless of the existing zoning or any rezoning as a result of the minor subdivision application.

So what if you're dead right?

Nicholsons teach defensive driving, emphasize importance of man-made and natural laws

Aloys Nicholson is positive about the benefits of the defensive driving course he and his wife, Novella, teach locally under the sponsorship of The National Retired Teachers' Association and the American Association of Retired Persons.

The two Carmel Valley residents will start another session of the eight hour course September 16 at the Canterbury Woods Auditorium.

Nicholson has been teaching driver education since 1943. He retired in 1966 from the Los Angeles school system after 22 years of service in driver training. After her retirement in 1969 as director of secondary education in the Burbank system, Mrs. Nicholson joined him to form the current teaching team.

Although they teach the course primarily for citizens 55 and older, the Nicholsons point out that the same course is used in schools and for a refresher for professional drivers.

Nicholson explains, "Most people know the rules of whatever game they are playing. If they play bridge, they take lessons and read columns in the paper. If they play golf, they pay a great deal of money for lessons from a pro."

"A professional athlete probably trained in high school and college to be an athlete, but before each season, he must learn the rules of the game all over again."

"Professional drivers are required to take refresher courses. Driving is the only activity which is a matter of life and death, and most people have taken only enough instruction to pass the initial examination."

He continues, "The record of these drivers is so poor, we must do something to reduce the fatality rate on the highways."

Displaying a local newspaper, Nicholson says emphatically, "Look at this. In 1970, they thought it was very important to give major space to a story about 40,000 deaths in Vietnam in nine years."

"But the 58,000 deaths directly related to highway accidents doesn't merit a mention. These deaths occur on the average of one every 10 minutes around the clock, but no one mentions that," he continues.

Nicholson explains that most courts in California, especially those in metropolitan areas, use defensive driving courses in relation to chronic offenders. He worked on such a program in Los Angeles.

Nicholson recounts, "I taught one class in an experimental phase and a police officer taught another, to determine if there would be a difference in the results. Both classes were outstanding. We had people in them who received five and six citations a year—a five year check following the class showed that not one had another violation."

Many courses teach the man-made laws, Nicholson explains, but the course he and his wife offer has emphasis on the natural laws as well.

"For example," he says "The braking distance of an automobile goes up the square of its speed, as does the turning radius."

"Taking this into consideration, if you're driving 10 miles per hour and you increase your speed to 60 mps, you're going six times as fast. Six times six is 36, which means it will take you 36 times the distance to stop at 60 as it would have at 10 miles per hour, or the radius of the turn is increased 36 times," he continues.

"Another law to consider is that kinetic energy must be changed to heat to stop a car. In a normal stop, for example, the heat occurs on the brake lining against the brake drum and with four full tire surfaces about the size of your hand skidding along the road," he explains.

Changing topics, Nicholson says, "The only way to get a traffic citation is to attract attention to yourself and your driving. If you're driving in a manner that will deliberately attract attention, why complain if you attract a police officer's attention?"

"Since none of us really knows the codebook, how can we be expected to drive defensively, you may ask," he points out. "The basic speed law gives us a reasonable answer: Section 22350: No person shall drive a vehicle upon a highway at a speed greater than is reasonable or prudent having due regard for weather, visibility, the traffic on and the surface and width of the highway, and in no event at a speed which endangers the safety of persons or property."

"What does this mean to Valley residents driving on Carmel Valley Road?" he asks.

"The slow driver is as much a menace as the fast driver. You can do nothing about the fast driver except stay out of his way, but you can plan for the slow driver," he says.

"Start four or five minutes earlier for your destination and a slow driver will no longer block your arrival. Call these minutes your 'living room.' The passengers in your car will appreciate the absence of temper you frequently show and enjoy the ride in a better condition," he explains.

Nicholson chuckles, "People should remember, automobile manufacturers recall many cars for defects. A driver should check himself for defects, or he may be recalled by his maker."

Some of the lessons covered include:

The defensive driving course is planned for eight hours to cover eight general subjects, which include:

Preventable or Not?

What is a preventable accident? What goes on in traffic court? Is it true Americans have the world's worst driving record? Is there such a thing as a perfect trip?

Avoiding Collisions with the Vehicle Ahead

What does "defensive driving" mean? How can a formula keep you out of accidents? How can you stay clear of rear-end collisions?

Avoiding Collisions with the Vehicle Behind

How do you cope with a tailgater? If he rams into your vehicle, is he completely at fault? What do you need to know in order to drive?

Avoiding Collisions with Oncoming Vehicles

Why are head-on crashes the deadliest? What are some of the signs that an oncoming car may cross the centerline into your path? What can you do?

Avoiding Intersection Collisions

Who has the right of way? Which way do you look first? What four steps can keep you out of an intersection crash?

The Art of Passing and Being Passed

How can you help another driver pass you? If another vehicle is approaching at 60 mph, how much distance do you need in order to complete the passing maneuver safely?

The Mystery Crash

How can you best control your vehicle on a curve? How do you recover safely from a right-wheel pavement drop-off?

Highland Gallery features several artists in August

The Highland Gallery on Highway 1 south of Carmel features the work of several artists in a group collection through the month of August.

The collection was selected by the new owner, Lynn Loscutoff. The director of the gallery is Gay Gallatin Powers.

George Lee of Carmel is one of the artists whose work is featured in the gallery. He is a recognized marine painter and his works are shown exclusively at the Highland Gallery.

Twin brothers Bob and Tom Bennett display their welding rod sculpture for which they have won 27 awards. Ten new designs have been cast in bronze, limited to 24 editions.

Another featured artist is Don Stone, whose work captures the viewer with the realistic simplicity of its execution. The winner of more than 50 awards, Stone recently won the Franklin Mint Award.

Others featured at the gallery include George Dergalis, a painter and sculptor; Thana Lauhakaikul, a native of Bangkok and winner of many international awards for his sculpture; Carolyn Hofstetter, who creates multi-media water colors of California scenes; and Paul Siski, a sculptor with a compelling command of his craft.

Polly Egelson, who creates varied sculptural renderings of the human form, is also featured, as well as Ann Cleveland Lange, who creates metal mobiles, stamobiles, and garden sculptures of stainless steel.

Magic Carpet splits

The Magic Carpet has flown away.

The popular theatrical group based at Hidden Valley Music Seminars in Carmel Valley disbanded in early July, said Peter Meckel, seminar director.

The decision to disband was reached without animosity and "not out of disenchantment with what's been going on," Meckel said. Jim Mairs, who has served as director of the Magic Carpet since its inception three years ago, decided "it was time for him to go on to other things," and announced his decision to the other members of the group and to Meckel.

A schedule of some 12 appearances for the fall, mostly at schools throughout the area, had been scheduled and was cancelled because of the decision.

And Hidden Valley Music Seminars will now return to the National Endowment for the Arts a $10,000 grant which had just been received for the coming year's activities of the Magic Carpet, Meckel said.

Meckel stressed that the function of Hidden Valley Music Seminars is to provide an educational outlet, and not to be a producing organization, and, to that extent, the Magic Carpet had filled its role. However, the decision to disband, he said, was unexpected.

Since July 5, when the decision was reached, Mairs is playing in a rock band in Chico, traveling, and planning to return to school. Steve and June Fry will go to Berkeley, where Steve plans to enter the Episcopal ministry.

John Russo, Dave Dunham and Carlo Grossman will remain with Hidden Valley Music Seminars to teach in a new program for elementary school children which is being launched this fall. Debbie Berry, John Bristol, and Wynn White, the remaining three members of the group, are in the area but have made no definite commitments, Meckel said.

To many who enjoyed the fanciful, imaginative, and vivacious theatrical renderings of children's literature which the Magic Carpet has provided, the news will be disappointing.

The Magic Carpet, under Mairs' direction, explored a new direction in making theatrical productions out of the writings of school children from all over the Monterey Peninsula. Often, these vignettes were strung together and included in programs with original works by the Magic Carpet.

"Miles Portley," "Piggie Wiggie Boogie," "Beauty and the Beast," "Alice in Wonderland," "Rumpelstiltskin," and "Kid's Stuff" were some of the most memorable of the Magic Carpet's productions. The first two represented original creations by Mairs and the Magic Carpet.

The others were thoroughly original reworkings of traditional children's literature, with the exception of "Kid's Stuff," an amalgam of children's writings, staged in the individual style of the Magic Carpet — an engaging blend of mime, improvisational, and street theater delivered with warmth and humor.

Meckel said plans are being laid for a new program to be called "Saturday Safari," which will be held at Hidden Valley Music Seminars, featuring theater, folk dance, photography, pottery, and possibly some form of instruction in humanities for children from the age of seven to 14.

Carlo Grossman and John Russo will participate as instructors in the theatrical aspect of this new program, which is still in the evolutionary stage, Meckel said.

THREE FACTS YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT PG&E RATE INCREASES.

ONE:

With only one exception, PG&E rate increases in the past three years have been to offset the higher prices we, PG&E, must pay for fuel oil and natural gas.

TWO:

PG&E rates must reflect the general overall inflation which affects everyone. We can no more control the costs of materials and services we have to pay for than you can control the cost of food, clothing, interest rates, etc.

THREE:

PG&E rates are among the lowest in the nation. Of the 13 largest U.S. cities, only Dallas and Houston have lower gas and electric rates than San Francisco.

Another Fact: You can hold down your utility bill by using energy wisely...conserving when and wherever you can.

elections

Tax override question to be decided Nov. 5 for Carmel District

VOTERS in the Carmel Unified School District will be asked to approve in the Nov. 5 election an override tax which the district board of education and administration see as vital to preventing inflation from devastating school programs.

The election, which requires a simple majority for approval, would add 43 cents to the district tax rate of $2.47 $100 assessed valuation.

The money generated from the tax would be used to rehabilitate Carmel High School and to combat inflation, which already has begun to eat into both personnel and services in the district.

The way Supt. Harris Taylor sees it, it's now or never for the district to pass the override tax, since legislation in the form of the Dills bill is likely to be passed to prohibit school districts from holding override elections after Jan. 1, 1975.

Behind the school district's dilemma lies not only the runaway inflation which affects all Americans, but the peculiarities of public school finance, which have undergone nothing short of a revolution in recent years.

The Serrano-Priest decision of the California Supreme Court, which found inequities in the wealth and resulting quality of instructional programs in different districts in the state unconstitutional, will undoubtedly result in legislation that will limit the financing capabilities of relatively wealthy districts such as the Carmel Unified School District, Taylor explained.

In addition, under provisions of two recently-passed pieces of legislation, Senate Bill 90 and Assembly Bill 1267, the means of determining district income has been altered.

The average allowable income per pupil, as set for the prior year, adjusted by an inflation factor, is multiplied by the estimated total average daily attendance of pupils enrolled to fix the amount of money available to the school district.

A tax rate is then established to yield the allowable funds, Taylor said. The inflation factor is included in the legislation and is determined by a formula which has enabled the Carmel Unified School district to increase its budget this year by only 2.7 per cent, at the same time that the cost of goods and services has risen by more than 10 per cent.

"We're caught with continued inflation in double digit numbers and permission to increase our budget by less than 3 per cent," Taylor said. "Something's got to give."

If the tax override election is approved by voters, it will enable the district to expand its budget by 8 per cent, still less than the current rate of inflation of about 1 per cent per month, or 12 per cent annually, Taylor explained.

Although the life of the override tax would be five years, Taylor estimates revenues produced would only be enough to carry the district operationally for two years.

Another factor which will affect the finances of the Carmel Unified School District in the near future will be legislative implementation of the so-called Jefferson ruling, which decreed that school districts must bring their per pupil expenditures to within $100 of each other to equalize educational opportunities.

"This will call for a massive new school finance decision within the next six years," Taylor remarked.

WHAT THIS all adds up to is the fact that public school districts throughout the state have been thrown helter-skelter into a race to keep up with inflation and changes in methods of financing until some definitive legislation is passed totally revamping the present system.

One of the "gambles" the Carmel Unified School District is taking is that some legislation implementing both the Serrano and Jefferson decisions will be enacted by the time the override tax expires, if it is passed.

"Even if we pass this, there's no complete protection for the school district. We have a serious gamble—that the state will pass new legislation within three years and that the cost of inflation will be held to within 8 per cent, and that the new state legislation won't inflict further damage on us," Taylor said.

The Carmel district currently receives basic state aid of $125 per pupil, the minimum amount allocated to districts.

In March, the voters of the Carmel Unified School District voted down resoundingly a proposed $5 million bond issue for the rehabilitation of Carmel High School, and for the switch of the middle school to the high school plant, and the high school to the present Carmel Middle School.

A total of 16 cents of the 43-cent tax would be used to generate $1,750,000 for the rehabilitation of the high school, with the remaining 27 cents of the tax revenues to be used to combat inflation throughout the district.

Taylor: 'now or never' for voter approval

Among the work which would be done at the high school if the tax is passed is rehabilitation of classrooms and addition of new rooms, replacement of heating and electrical systems, and general renovation of all classrooms and the ailing gymnasium.

Taylor believes it is important to make a distinction between "maintenance" and "rehabilitation" of facilities. The former term implies the routine painting, cleaning and repair of buildings which are required for normal upkeep, Taylor said. The latter means major repair or replacement of vital parts of a building, such as are required at Carmel High School.

"When you talk about pulling out plumbing and electrical systems, you're talking about major repairs," he said.

"The district is requesting the electorate to authorize a tax increase for the next five years to bring district income up to within striking distance of the estimated increase in cost of living, and to allow the district to accumulate enough funds to complete the major rehabilitation of Carmel High School," a fact sheet prepared by Taylor's office declares.

Although the rate of inflation is 12 per cent and the tax override would give the district only an 8 per cent handle on that inflation, the district board and administration sees the override tax as the very minimum required to avert disaster in instructional programs.

"We could have asked for a higher tax rate," Taylor said. "We decided to go down as low as we could and still function. To eliminate all the gambles, we could have asked for a 70-cent tax increase."

SOME OF THE effects inflation already has wrought in the district include the elimination of two certificated and one classified staff member and the postponement of a $35,000 school bus due to lack of funds, Taylor said.

One of the most alarming effects of inflation in the district has been the skyrocketing cost of supplies and equipment. Based on a random sample of such items, Taylor estimates the cost of such basic items as paper supplies, ink, and related items to have increased by 50.3 per cent in the last two years. At the same time, the funds available to cover those costs have increased at the rate of 7.5 per cent.

Over the next five years, the district expects to reduce its professional staff by another 15 members, Taylor said.

Taylor predicts that district enrollment will be reduced by some 30 pupils this year over last year, as the declining enrollment trend continues. And, within the next two years, he expects enrollment to be 250 or 300 pupils less than its highest peak a few years ago.

But after that, he expects enrollment to begin to increase again to reflect continued slow, but steady, growth in the area. The enrollment would begin to increase again by 1978, Taylor predicts. Without the passage of the override tax, the district tax rate would drop 20 cents per $100 assessed valuation in the coming five years. Last year, the tax rate was reduced 16 cents, and this year it was reduced by 20 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

While Taylor is reluctant to invoke dark visions of what might happen in the district if the override tax isn't passed, for fear it might be construed as a threat to voters, there are certain effects which would be fairly predictable.

"If it's not passed, there would be reductions across the board in personnel, reduction or elimination of some school programs, some low enrollment classes at the high school would be dropped, the high school would go from a five-period to a six-period day, there would be the elimination of all field trips--and there'd be more than that," he said.

Taylor said a citizen campaign will be launched--not to twist people's arms or threaten them--but to inform the public of the reasons for the override election.

"We have to spell out what the issues are and reach as many people in the community as we can. We will be ringing doorbells and talking to people. We expect a lot of citizen participation," Taylor said.

Taylor is concerned that the school district's override election might be lost in the mass of other ballot measures which voters will confront in November, including gubernatorial, congressional, assembly, and other local measures. The citizen awareness campaign is designed to make the override measure visible to voters.

The inflationary spiral in which everyone is caught is magnified in the case of the Carmel Unified School District because of two factors: its large geographic size (594 square miles) and its high cost to operate many, small schools; such as Captain Cooper at Big Sur.

These factors generate higher-than-average costs in transportation and in personnel in order to deliver equal educational services to all pupils, Taylor said.

"In our two largest schools, there is one classified person for each 100 students," he commented. "And the ratio is one per 55 students in the smallest schools. For efficient operation, we should have one junior high, one high school and three elementary schools."

Taylor estimates that the district spends six times as much for transportation than does, for example Pacific Grove Unified School District. "You take the transportation thing out and the excess cost for small units, and we're not fat," he said.

Another factor which affects school district finances is the fact two-thirds of the district personnel are at the upper range of the salary schedule because of a low turnover rate, resulting in relatively high salary costs.

"If the federal government can keep the cost of living at 2.7 per cent, we'll be happy to live with the state-allowed budget increase," Taylor said skeptically. "But even if we pass this override, we still won't be able to keep up with inflation."

Japanese band at local jazz fest

In a coals to Newcastle move, Japanese big band jazz will be premiered at the 17th Annual Monterey Jazz Festival in September. It will be the first American appearance of director Toshiyuki Miyama and his "New Herd". Friday evening, Sept. 20, in the festival's opening concert.

Named after the "Herd" bands of Woody Herman, the "New Herd" presents jazz strongly reminiscent of Herman and another big American band, that of Stan Kenton.

The "New Herd," considered by many critics to be the most modern big jazz band in Japan, was formed in 1958 by Toshiyuki Miyama. While its music reflects strong American influence, Miyama notes the group has begun in the past several years to play original jazz arrangements, leaning on ensemble and solo improvisation with electronic sounds in the mood of Oriental fantasy.

Composer and arranger K. Yamaki, guitarist with the "New Herd," has included such characteristics of Japanese music as its modes, notes and harmonies into his modern orchestrations.

The band has been a steady winner of Japanese critics' polls and has been recording since 1969.

Leader Toshiyuki Miyama was born in 1921 and played clarinet in the Japanese navy brass band. He organized his first group, "Jive Aces," in 1950. During the following years the group was expanded until 1958 when it became the "New Herd."

In announcing the scheduled appearance of Toshiyuki Miyama and the "New Herd," festival founder and general manager Jimmy Lyons noted: "We view the annual Monterey Jazz Festival as an international event where jazz musicians and groups from around the world frequently can assemble to perform. For that reason, we are pleased that Miyama and his 'New Herd' will be joining us in Monterey where for the first time American audiences can hear jazz with a definite Japanese flavor."

The 17th Annual Monterey Jazz Festival is scheduled for the week-end of Sept. 20, 21 and 22. As in previous years, the five concert festival will be held in the 7000-seat arena on the Monterey County Fairgrounds. For information write P.O. Box JAZZ, Monterey, 93940, or phone (408) 373-3366.

"MARGARET" is one of the portraits by Andre Gisson demonstrating his fondness for Impressionism which will be part of the exhibit of his work at Miner's Gallery Americana in Carmel.

Gisson exhibit opens Saturday at Miner's Gallery Americana

The third one-man show by American impressionist painter Andre Gisson opens Aug. 31 at Miner's Gallery Americana at Lincoln and 6th in Carmel.

Gisson has attained international posture in his handling of a wide range of both European and Far Eastern influences. Born in New York in 1929, Gisson is a graduate of art from Pratt Institute and has studied extensively in Japan and Europe.

Gisson continues to travel extensively in search of subjects and has been influenced particularly by his summers in Europe.

Among Gisson's subject matter are landscapes and beach scenes, figure studies, still life, and florals. Included in these is the softness of line characteristic of the Impressionist tradition.

Gisson's concern is for the creation of a mood, rather than for the precise recreation of a subject or landscape. Japanese influences can be felt in Gisson's floral and still life paintings, just as the French influence is evident in his landscapes and beach scenes.

Bird disease reported

Reports of a suspected outbreak of trichomoniasis (canker) in doves and band-tailed pigeons in the Monterey Peninsula area are being received by the Department of Fish and Game.

The department urges that any one noticing sick birds at their feeder discontinue feeding immediately. Dispersing of birds into the wild is the best known program for combating this disease, the department says.

The organism is passed from bird to bird primarily at bird feeding stations. Picking up grain dropped by an infected bird and bill-touching are principal means of transmission.

A microscopic parasite that lives in the throat of doves and pigeons is the cause of the disease. As the parasite multiplies, throat tissues become inflamed. In many cases, there is blockage of the throat which prevents the bird from swallowing.

As the disease becomes more severe, there is noticeable emaciation in the bird. Weakened birds lose their inclination to fly and will take wing only at the last possible moment when approached.

The department says medication of free-ranging doves and pigeons has not proven useful. Treated water does not appeal to birds and they either go elsewhere or refuse to drink medicated water.

Application of a drug to their food has not worked out because dosage is impossible to control.

In experiments, drugs have killed the organisms in the throat. However, the birds' immunity was also destroyed so they later succumbed to a more virulent strain of the parasite.

Although the disease primarily affects doves and pigeons, during a severe outbreak it may spill over into other species such as finches, sparrows and black birds that frequent the same areas

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

Any individual, firm or agency who plans to build or place a structure in, on, under, or over the navigable water of the United States must first obtain a permit from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers. Such permits are also required for any dredging, filling, or dredge disposal in navigable waters. Regulations governing the administrative procedures on permits for activities in navigable or ocean waters were published in the Federal Register on April 3, 1974 as 33 CFR 209.120.

Navigable waters are any waters which are, have been, or can be used for commercial or navigation purposes. Federal permit authority extends over the entire surface of such a water body. Thus, any work in areas presently or formerly subject to tidal action (below the plane of mean higher high water, including unfilled areas behind dikes) or below the ordinary high water mark of rivers and streams may require a Corps permit.

The Federal Corps of Engineers permit is required in addition to any State or local permits. Private ownership of land under or beside the water has no effect on the requirement. If work is done in navigable waters as described above without a permit from the Corps, civil or criminal actions (including removal) can be instituted pursuant to 33 U.S. Code Secs. 406, 407, and 1319. Any questions regarding permits for work in navigable waters may be directed to the Regulatory Functions Branch, San Francisco District, U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, 100 McAllister Street, San Francisco 94102, telephone: (415) 556-5178 or 556-5489.

Board response to grand jury report registered Tuesday

Disagreeing only six times with the grand jury, the board of supervisors issued their official response to the grand jury report Tuesday morning in their weekly meeting.

The supervisors said they felt it inappropriate for the board to encourage the legislature to make amendments to the education code regarding the power of local districts to reduce the teaching staffs, saying they felt it was the responsibility of the various school boards.

In response to a suggestion that the purchasing department be separated from the Department of Administrative Management, the board's response noted the county administrator has an assistant who carries on the day to day purchasing duties and that separation of the department would increase costs for the service without increasing effectiveness.

The board disagreed with the jury's note that the building inspection office needed further staffing. It did concur that a four wheel drive unit should be available.

The board said it did not believe an additional lavatory was needed for the agricultural commissioner's offices, but noted the two existing restrooms were scheduled for renovation in fiscal 1974-75.

The board disagreed with the need for additional space for the Pacific Grove Court of Justice, saying space was added last year to provide a jury room and additional space for storage.

The board did not concur with the recommendation that a full time maintenance man be hired for building and repair for the detention facilities, saying, "We believe every effort must continue to be made to have the cleanliness of the facilities maintained by the inmates rather than hiring an outside custodial crew."

The board concurred with findings of the grand jury on several departments including planning, floor control and water conservation, assessor's office, treasurer-tax collector's office, auditor-controller, county clerk-recorder, Monterey County Superior Courts, Jury Commissioner's Office, Juvenile Hall, Juvenile Court Referee, Salinas Municipal Court, Public Defender, Health Department.

In noting changes since the report and various agreements on changes, the board pointed out several areas of concern, including:

-A change in the per diem and mileage payments to grand jurors. (The board noted agreement with a uniform statewide fee, but did not agree with reimbursement identical to county employees and officials.)

-Weekly agendas to each grand juror, joint review of reports by incoming and retiring grand juries, attendance at committee meetings, elimination of the Soledad Correctional Facility as a grand jury responsibility.

-Individual air conditioning unit purchased for the Monet Monterey Office of the Communications Department, additional technician added to the department, painting of the Salinas office.

-New job description for the Communications Department, additional technician added to the department, painting of the Salinas office.

-New job description for the consumer affairs personnel.

-Elimination of the use of sight draft accounts by the county clerk-recorder, change of rooms of the recorder's office and law library.

-Institution of a new system to improve collection and restitution payments by the probation department, consideration of a facility for girls.

-Additional storage space being reviewed by probation officer.
